

Dialogue plays an important role, but you need to find settings where this can be done and it's important to understand other faith traditions. This is important to do on many occasions but you have to offer (or intentionally find) opportunities to do this.

~Warren

Dialogues are a great way to come to understanding the essence and importance of other faiths of my fellow human beings. It is a wonderful way to find out what we have in common and the why of our differences. Keeping an open mind in such dialogues is of vital importance.

~Bob

Dialogue is a cornerstone of unity. The Bahá'í writings encourage open and respectful consultation as a means of discovering truth and resolving differences. When we take the time to hear someone else's perspective, we often find we have more in common than we expected. Honest, respectful dialogue helps us see the threads that connect us, and those threads become the foundation for mutual understanding and unity.
